Description:

From Publishers Weekly "In this profound and accessible meditation on race, novelist (The Professor's Daughter) and scholar Raboteau depicts her travels from Israel and Jamaica to Africa and the Deep South in search of the elusive African-American notion of "home.'" —Publishers Weekly

From "Part political statement, part memoir, this intense personal account roots the mythic perilous journey in the writer's search for home, in the U.S. and across the globe... sure to inspire intense debate about the search for meaning." —Booklist
